Todd Kneebone, a former Bangor resident, recently returned from a trip to Wales and Cornwall, where he connected with his ancestors and the heritage of his hometown. What attracted settlers from Cornwall, in southern England, to the Slate Belt? Was Bangor, Wales and the surrounding area really the slate capital of the world? And why is there such a thick rim of crust on Cornish pasties? Todd's presentation will answer these questions, and more, to help us connect with the past. Masks are required for everyone who attends the presentation and social distancing will be observed. The Heritage Center is a 501 ©3 non-profit that protects and teaches the culture and handicrafts of the different groups that settled in the area. An Old Piano Gets a New Look and New Home in Downtown Bangor

By Candy Martin

An old piano, a little paint, and a few good people, bring new life and hope to a small town.

As the story goes; Leo Bongiorno, of Bangor Trust Brewing sent Faith Sarisky, the coordinator of the Beautify Bangor Mural Project, a video he saw online of a piano with random people stopping by to play. Both Leo and Faith are members of the Bangor Historic Business Assoc. (HBBA).

Faith said "I thought to myself: "How awesome would this be in downtown Bangor." She quickly went to Facebook and made a post asking for a donation of a piano. Within days she received responses from people willing to donate their old pianos. She was amazed by how many people had contacted her, ten in all responded to her post.

Allex Dostal was one of the ten. She said that she had an old piano stored at her sister's house and was interested in donating it. Bob Herring "the piano guy" also contacted Faith and told her that he would be happy to donate his services and repair and tune the piano once one was found.

Bob went house to house to check out all 10 pianos before he decided on Allex's piano. A 1923 player piano, which hadn't been tuned in 50 years. The decision was made that Allex's piano was "the one".

Allex was thrilled to learn her piano was chosen. But her involvement in the project didn't end there. She asked Faith if she could paint the piano. Allex is also an artist, well more like crafty in her words: "I knew I wanted it to be colorful, and the design I chose is something that I have been doodling and playing with for years. I am so proud to be a part of this project, I want to help inspire the younger generation." said Allex.

With Bob "the piano guy" and Allex on board, the plan was underway to restore the old piano and relocate it to downtown Bangor. Next on the agenda was finding a sponsor. Faith had asked Carl Palmeri, a realtor at her business, Realty Solutions of PA, to ask his friend and bandmate Cody Templeton, (Carl is the bass player in The Cody Templeton Band) if he would be interested in sponsorship, Cody agreed to sponsor. The piano is sponsored by both Carl Palmeri, of Realty Solutions of PA. and The Cody Templeton Band.

Faith continued to post updates on Facebook and other local social media sites to keep the community abreast of the progress of the piano. Soon she was contacted by Channel 69 News who wanted to do a piece on the piano. On Monday, August 30th the Channel 69 news crew met Faith and Bob at his home along with the moving crew, which consisted of Bob, Cody, Carl, and Faith's son Michael who loaded the piano into Bob's trailer and transported it downtown, and then unloaded it; not an easy feat.

The Channel 69 news crew interviewed all involved in the piano project that day. Myself and Lisa Newberry, the Belt and Beyond photographer, were invited to watch this all unfold. The piano was relocated to its new home on Broadway, across the street from the Broadway Pub in downtown Bangor. The story could have ended here, but it didn't. Bangor's own Cody Templeton, along with band member Sarah Lanier, who played the piano, sang a duet for all of us. It was the perfect ending to the story of an old piano, given new life and inspiration to a small town.

Look for updates on Facebook, the Beautify Bangor Mural Project, and The Belt and Beyond as to when the segment will air on Channel 69 news later this month!
