The Benefits of Joining a Book Club

By Ed Rabinowitz

Tired of not finishing the books you start reading? Or, having finished a good book, frustrated there's no one to share your reading experience with?

The Bangor Library Book Club can help resolve both of those issues, and more.

According to the Stratford Writers Festival website, there are many reasons for joining a book club. Among them, book clubs are good social venues that help develop new friendships.

They also help readers expand their horizons by being exposed to books they might have previously considered.

Members of the Bangor Library Book Club agree.

"Book Club is a great opportunity to meet new people and be exposed to a variety of books in a welcoming environment," club member Krystal Ditzig says.

The book club, which meets the first Tuesday of each month on the second floor of the library from 6:30PM to 7:30PM, develops its reading list from member recommendations. Members vote on which books to add to the reading list. The result is a diverse collection of fiction and non-fiction genres. Each member whose recommendation is selected hosts that month's discussion.

Questions circulated via email prior to the meeting help foster lively and informative discussions.

And gaining insight from others is also beneficial, because the discussions at book club meetings serve as a window into what others think.

Book club member Judy Cannavo points to a quote from American writer and critic Edmund Wilson: "No two persons ever read the same book." "It's true," Cannavo says. "I really enjoy learning about other readers' unique perspectives at book club meetings."

Recent book club selections include "The Measure" by Nikki Erlick, "The Maid" by Nita Prose, "The Midnight Library" by Matt Haig, and "The Tattooist of Auschwitz" by Heather Morris.

"I am so glad I found this group because our book choice process has exposed me to books I might not have felt inclined to explore on my own," member Laraine Reedy says. "I have also discovered through our discussions that there are often perspectives that I would never have thought of if I simply read the books alone. I hope more people in the area will join us."

To learn more about the book club, contact the Bangor Library at 610-588-4136 or come to the next book club meeting on Tuesday, May 2, at 6:30pm, when the club will discuss "The Professor and the Madman" by Simon Winchester.

The Planning by Robert L. Martin

We are the result of meticulous planning of the Universe in its primal form expanding, from darkness into light and light into life, then ashes into Adam before he took a wife, from the spirit into matter and matter into soil, then soil into furrows to let the crops come of age and we as the consumers turn another page as the planning developed to never come to rest and the seasons get ready for their manifest as the heat of the sun returns in the spring.
