Freedom - So Worth Celebrating

By Kathleen McFall

Independence Day is one of the most significant holidays in the United States.

On July 4, Americans celebrate the birth of our nation - hosting barbecues, playing backyard games, and waving sparklers.

We raise flags, attend parades and watch fireworks at night. We even wear red white and blue.

Yet, behind these familiar festive scenes lies a profound truth: we are celebrating freedom.

While Independence Day is a time to connect with family and friends, it also serves as a reminder of the sacrifices made by those who fought for freedom and the ongoing struggle for liberty and equality.

The first paragraph of the Declaration of Independence is a beautiful expression of what freedom truly means:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

However, when we celebrate the 4th of July, we aren't just commemorating a document signed by our Founding Fathers. We are celebrating the gift of being truly free.

Freedom is a virtue to be practiced, a commitment to the belief that every human being deserves dignity.

Freedom empowers each of us individually. It enables us to live a life committed to being the best person that we can be, free from tyranny and free to choose how we worship and live.

Freedom should permeate our everyday life. It is not just something that happens in government. We can experience it in our homes, our schools, our churches, and our relationships.

Freedom isn't about doing whatever we want. It's about doing what is right, even when it's difficult.

America has always been more than a place on the map. It represents the essential principle we live by.

We live in a country where we can pursue spiritual and civic freedom. We exercise it with courage and conviction.

"Freedom isn't free" is not just a slogan — it is a reality.

It is important to remember that the freedom we enjoy was purchased with blood and sacrifice.

For hundreds of years men and women have fought and given up their lives to guarantee our freedom today.

Some wore uniforms. Others marched in the streets.

Some knelt in prayer. They paid a price so that we might live in liberty.

The Fourth of July reminds us of Yorktown and Gettysburg, of Normandy and Iwo Jima, of Selma and Stonewall, of the Twin Towers, of Afghanistan and so many other momentous periods in our history.

As we celebrate this Independence Day, let's do more than wave flags and light sparklers. Let's recommit ourselves as caretakers of freedom.

We can teach our children the importance of the blessings they enjoy, and be mindful of our neighbors, even when we disagree. We can vote and let our voices be heard.

Most importantly, we should remember that freedom, like faith, is a journey. Our freedom should be respectful and filled with gratitude.

True freedom at its deepest level is rooted in love - in the desire to protect our family, our community, our country and our freedom to worship.

Independence Day was deeply intertwined with religious freedom, and the desire for people to have the freedom to practice their faith without interference.

Our freedom enables us to seek truth freely, worship freely, and speak freely.

Freedom is not a destination. It is a daily choice — to live with courage, to speak with kindness and to love this nation not because it is perfect, but because we are called to help perfect it.

The 4th of July celebrates the principles of liberty, equality, and self-governance. They are the cornerstones of American democracy which continue to resonate with Americans today.

As the night sky explodes in color this 4th of July, may we see more than just a spectacular display. May we see symbols of struggle, of triumph, of resilience, and of hope.

Happy Independence Day. May God continue to bless America.

Freedom isn't about doing whatever we want. It's about doing what is right, even when it's difficult.

Tips to Keep Your Pet Safe This July 4th

The Fourth of July is a great time to celebrate with friends, food and fun in the sun. But not so much fun for your pet. It's important to remember that certain events and activities can be hazardous for animals. Here are a few tips to keep your pet happy and healthy this Fourth of July!

- Loud, crowded fireworks displays are no fun for pets, who can become frightened or disoriented by the loud noise. Please resist the urge to take them to your Fourth of July festivities. Instead, keep them safe from the noise in a quiet, sheltered and escape-proof area at home.
- Never use fireworks around pets! While exposure to lit fireworks can potentially result in severe burns and/or trauma to the face and paws of curious pets. Even unused fireworks can pose a danger. Many types contain potentially toxic substances, including potassium nitrate, arsenic and other heavy metals.
- Be prepared in the event that your pet does escape. Keep your pets IDs up to date! It's a good idea for all your pets, even indoor-only pets, to always wear a collar with an ID tag that includes your name, phone number and any relevant contact information.

Happy 249th
by Robert I. Martin

Happy Birthday to you America.
This occasion is always one grand spectacle with fireworks and trumpets sounding and family picnics and parades abounding.

Your birthday cake has to be quite large with enough room for 249 candles so far and one more added to next year and so on in celebration of independence that you won.
Happy Birthday and many more to come.
